Writer's block is an ostensible disadvantage in writing or communicating, especially with respect to fully expressing thoughts, ideas, feelings etc., which results in a lack of creativity or productivity often because ideas would not flow easily from one thought/objective to another without interruption. Writer's block is one of the main problems that many people face while writing academic essays or some other paper for publishing . Writer's block is a phenomenon of our time, which can occur to anyone, regardless of age, sex or profession. This unpleasant psychological state is characterized by an inability to begin or continue work on a writing project, due to stress or lack of inspiration. It is also considered as a mental condition , which manifests itself in different forms of inhibition. Many people are not aware that writer's block can be treated. The majority of the population considers it to be an incurable disease . But each case of writer's block can be treated. If you can find a creative way to cope with this type of disorder, then it is possible to overcome your problems. The causes of writer's block are diverse. The causes of writer's block causes can be physical, psychological or both. The most common reason for writer's block is stress . These cases are usually caused by school assignments, deadlines, work overload or different other obstacles that are preventing the creative process from happening, as it normally would. Writer's blocks can also result from lack of motivation . Our thoughts simply cannot make themselves heard . They appear to be paralyzed. It is very difficult to start a writing project in a mental state like this. In other cases, writer's block might be caused by psychological reasons . There are different types of inhibitions that can prevent a person from starting or completing a writing project. In the course of the years, each one of us encounters situations in which we feel unsafe to share our own thoughts with others. This fear can come from many sources, such as disappointment from the society, your parents or friends etc. In case you have experienced some sort of trauma in your life , for example a divorce , death of a close one or abuse , it can result in writer's block too . Some people, including students, start writing a paper, but cannot continue until they have reached a specific word count. This phenomenon goes back to a psychological reason. They are afraid to share their own thoughts with others, because they feel that the paper is not perfect yet. Writer's block is not necessarily a sign of some psychological disorder . In many case it can be overcome by some people on their own. The best way to cope with writer's block is to find different creative ways of overcoming this problem and getting started or continuing your project. In some occasions, you might find that the only way that worked for you was seeking help from someone else.
